

In Uttar Pradesh, the Adani Group will build South Asia's largest integrated munitions production factory. For this reason, the business is spending Rs 1,500 crore in a 250-acre project as part of the UP Defence Industrial Corridor.

It will include cutting-edge technologies for tiny and medium-caliber ammunition.

Meanwhile, West Bengal Industry Minister Partha Chatterjee said on Monday that the state government has approved Adani Enterprises' plan to build a hyper-scale data centre in Bengal Silicon Valley in the city's New Town district. According to Chatterjee, the cabinet awarded the business permission to build the plant on 51.75 acres of land.
