

As part of the Google for Startups programme, Google has announced the opening of Startup School India (SSI). This is a platform that Google will set up so that businesses in smaller cities may connect with and learn from the top investors, entrepreneurs, and programmers. The Startup School India was founded with the intention of connecting with as many Indian startups as possible. With this initiative, Google hopes to connect with at least 10,000 entrepreneurs.

The nine-week SSI programme will be given digitally and will include fireside discussions with Google leaders and forward-thinking collaborators from the startup environment, covering finance, D2C, B2B, and B2C e-commerce, language, social media & networking, job search, and many more areas.
