

Technology startup Nothing, helmed by former OnePlus co-founder Carl Pei, has stated that it will manufacture all smartphones sold in India domestically.

The Nothing Phone 1 will be the company's first smartphone, featuring an uncluttered and basic user interface designed to appeal to luxury smartphone customers.

Earlier in March, this Google-backed startup revealed ambitions to extend its device ecosystem beyond the audio area, beginning with a move into the smartphone market. The business also revealed that the smartphones will be made in Tamil Nadu.

Manu Sharma, vice president and general manager, Nothing India told news agency PTI, "we are thrilled to announce that every phone (1) sold in India will be manufactured locally."
