

In Bengaluru, Pure Storage, a data storage technology and services company, has opened its India Research and Development (R&D) centre.

According to Pure, the centre is an important part of the company's worldwide innovation engine and a commitment to the government's "Make in India" agenda.

Ajay Singh, Chief Product Officer, Pure Storage said, "Innovation is at the core of everything that we do. We strongly believe that talent knows no boundaries and can be found across all regions. The India R&D centre will further foster data management capabilities in India while ensuring Pure's global customers benefit from this abundance of talent."
