

Tata Motors expects its growth momentum to continue this year, and that supply-side challenges would improve, allowing it to roll out more units to meet increased demand. The Mumbai-based automaker, which sells models like the Punch, Nexon, and Harrier, saw total passenger vehicle deliveries to dealerships increase by 44% to 99,002 units in the third quarter (October-December 2021), up from 68,806 units the previous year. It announced a 50 per cent increase in overall passenger vehicle sales last month, at 35,299 units, up from 23,545 units in December 2020.
